Kyla Ross

African/Japanese/Filipino/Puerto Rican American

Olympic Gymnast

Kyla Ross (1996-) had so much strength and energy as a baby that her parents enrolled her in gymnastics at the age of three. As a teenager, she helped her teams win many awards, including a team gold medal in the 2012 London Olympics. Kyla showed many different gymnastics skills. She could swing over, under, and between two uneven bars high in the air. Kyla could leap onto a balance beam to do somersaults and flips. She showed quick tumbling and graceful dance moves on floor mats. Kyla loved gymnastics and always cheered for her teammates in their programs.
